“We are interested in the question of what will survive from our time in history. There is an old stereotypical opposition between material and spiritual dimensions, but the reality of today’s life is showing us the existence of a third dimension: a virtual reality. It is neither material nor spiritual, yet it promises the individual – or rather, his or her “profile”- an eternal life, by adopting the functions of religion.”

Recycle Group

Created in 2008 by Andrey Blokhin (b.1987) and Georgy Kuznetsov (b.1985), Recycle Group uses recycled imagery and materials from the industrial era to explore the future of contemporary culture. Consumerism and the tensions between temporal and spiritual powers are driving themes of their work.

Recycle Group will represent Russia for the 57th Venice Biennale; The National Pushkin Museum (Moscow) will present a personal exhibition of their works in June 2017.
